29 November 2013

Dear Friends,

Hard to believe that it's one year since I was sitting writing a newsletter confirming the opening date of our new farm shop and café on the 29th November 2012....

...and what a year it's been.

I think for most of you reading this newsletter, I won't need to say much about the shop because you'll have been, seen, enjoyed (hopefully) and come to know and appreciate the shop for yourselves. However, I will point out three predominant comments which I have heard repeatedly from people over the year and which are very heartening because they relate to (and reflect) three important elements of our ethos and aspirations at Loch Arthur.

- Firstly, people are astounded by the quality and beauty of the building itself, the materials used to build it and the layout and feeling of the produce within it. This feels to me like a reflection of our commitment to a sound economic endeavour, a 'social enterprise' of meaning and purpose.
- Secondly, people comment on the profound quality of calm when visiting the shop and café and the fact that they have the unusual experience of a retail environment which actually makes them feel relaxed. This feels to me like a reflection of our spiritual and cultural striving as a Community ... our efforts to imbue all things we do with a sense of purpose and meaning.
- Thirdly, people are astounded by the quality of the people who work in the shop and café ... their pleasantness, knowledge and enjoyment of the work they do. This feels to me like a reflection of our efforts to create a healthy social and human environment in all that we do at Loch Arthur.

For us, a lot of effort and commitment went into the planning and shaping of this new enterprise and it's very heartening to see that it is now reflecting our aspirations as a Community and as a Social Enterprise.

It is also incredibly heartening to see how well received it has been by the local community and how much it seems to have come to mean to so many people in such a short space of time.

So, once again, Christmas is looming and we look forward to welcoming you into the shop to socialise, eat, drink and revel in the wonderful offerings.

And the final word.... On Friday 29th we celebrated our first anniversary of opening our new shop. Most businesses would judge the success of their first year by statistics. Clearly, our yardstick is different. I know this by the number of customers who spoke to me about what a special place we have created ... a place that adds a new dimension to, and enhances the quality of, their lives. I felt tears well up in my eyes. Thank you all ...

With best wishes Barry Graham
